thority, shifting some of the powers to the city council. The council would take on the responsibility of making key appointments and would also need to approve the mayor's interactions with other government entities.

Smith said the proposed changes would "essentially diminish the mayor's authority... empowering the council to appoint the administrator."

Those who favor the amendments say they will "make the process more inclusive," giving the council members more responsibilities similar to those currently held by the mayor.

Mayor Christi Fraga, who is running for reelection, criticized the proposed changes to the city charter. "These amendments don't help or bring stability to our city. Instead, they take away power — not from me or the mayor's office, but from the residents. The real problem is that these changes weaken the authority of the people who elect their mayor."

Here's what the other proposed amendments would do.

● Amendment 1 would change the name of the city's form of government, from "Mayor-Council-Manager" to "Council-Manager," without eliminating the position of the mayor.

● Amendment 2 would allow the council to create and organize committees. Currently the mayor creates committees and appoints members, subject to council approval.

● Amendment 3 would force the mayor to get council approval for official actions involving other government entities. Currently, the mayor represents the city in all such dealings.

● Amendment 6 would change the process for appointing the city manager. Currently, the mayor nominates the city manager, and the council confirms the appointment. Under the proposed change, the city manager would be selected by the council based on recommendations from a search committee, similar to the process for appointing the city attorney and city clerk.

DORAL

● Amendment 7 would change how members are appointed to city boards and agencies. It proposes that each board or agency have members with the mayor and each council member for each point-in-time. Currently, board members are appointed by the mayor.

bers are appointed by the mayor subject to council approval.

● Amendment 9 proposes changing the review period for the Charter Revision Commission, which operates under the direction of the council to review and suggest changes to the city charter. The review cycle would shift from every five years to every 10 years.

● Amendment 10 seeks to replace the Office of Charter Enforcement with an Office of Inspector General. If the amendment passes the new office would be responsible for conducting investigations, audits, reviews, and oversight of municipal matters, including city contracts, programs, projects and expenditures.
